HAVE CLOSE CALL IN PLANE CRASH

Marc Worst and his sister Martha Worst, of Watsonville, former residents of Daly City and graduates of Jefferson Union high school, were injured in an airplane crash at San Rafael last Sunday.

Marc Worst, the pilot of the plane which was caught in an air pocket and overturned as he was making a landing, suffered a scalp wound and cuts and bruises. Martha Worst, sister of the young pilot, suffered lacerations and shock, while Harold Painter, a mechanic at the Watsonville airport, had his nose broken.

Since leaving Daly City, the Worst family home has been near Watsonville. Young Worst has taken up aviation, and is considered very careful and competent.

Marc Worst was the first graduate of Jefferson Union high school. In addition to his school work, he took a prominent part in the Boy Scout movement in Daly City, being one of the best known Scouts in this section, and was a member of the Daly City Record staff for three years.

The many friends of the Worst family in Daly City will be glad to know the youthful victims of the crash are rapidly recovering from their injuries.

SEARCHING FOR FIEND WHO ATTACKED GIRL

Chief of Police Jack Doyle and the members of the Daly City police force are continuing the search for the fiend who lured a 10-year-old girl into the hills last Friday and criminally assaulted her. Chief Doyle is of the opinion that the attacker is the same one who has perpetrated several outrages on children in San Francisco, and the search will be continued until the culprit is captured. When shown photographs of several suspects, the girl was unable to identify any one as her assailant.

REDWOOD CITY MAN KILLED AT CROSSING

Noah A. Zuber, 62-year-old carpenter of Redwood City, was killed instantly last Tuesday morning when he failed to see the approach of a second train at the Rogers street crossing, Redwood City, and drove onto the track. Zuber was driving west on Rogers street and had waited for a San Francisco bound train to clear the crossing. He then drove forward directly in front of a train bound for San Jose. The machine was entirely wrecked and the aged man's body hurled ninety feet along the railway right-of-way. Witnesses to the fatal accident said the signal was in operation, giving warning of the approach of the second train.

DRIVER OF DEATH AUTO CONFESSES TO SHERIFF

George Wolff, 24-year-old Vallejo druggist, who last Saturday confessed to Sheriff Jaems J. McGrath that his automobile ran over Samuel Abrams, aged 57, as he lay on the highway near his Salada Beach cabin a week ago Sunday, is at liberty on $2,000 bail. He will be arraigned on a hit and run charge. Wolff told Sheriff McGrath he became frightened when he found his car had passed over the man's body and failed to report the accident. It was at first thought Abrams had been murdered.

SAN MATEO COUNTY'S FALL FLOWER FESTIVAL

All of San Mateo county will unite to make the Fall Flower Festival of 1931 the most spectacular event of the kind ever seen hereabouts, according to Bruce Gibson, who is chairman of the committee, made up of representatives from every town and organization in the county. The first meeting of the committee was held in the City Hall at San Mateo recently, and a tentative schedule adopted. The Show will be held on October 23, 24, 25. The place has not yet been decided upon.

HORSE SHOW WILL BE HELD IN MENLO PARK IN AUGUST

The old Palo Alto horse show will move to Menlo Park this year, and will be known as the San Mateo County National Horse Show, according to Mrs. W. P. Roth, president, who announces that the show will be held permanently at the Menlo Circus Club. The show was formerly held on the campus at Stanford. Already the work of moving the quarters from Stanford to the Circus Club is under way, to be ready for the show from August 8 to 15.

BOARD SELECTS PLANNING BODY

San Mateo county's new planning commission was practically completed Monday as the chairman of the board of supervisors named all but one member of the new organization. The member not yet selected is from the Fifth district, but it is expected that Dr. C. V. Thompson will make known his choice in a few days.

Supervisor Thomas L. Hickey selected Mayor H. H. Smith, of Daly City; Supervisor Rosalie M. Brown selected John Wisnom, San Mateo; Supervisor John Poole selected Roy N. Bishop, Woodside; Chairman Manual Francis selected Alvin Hatch, Half Moon Bay, and the board agreed on the selection of J. F. Cambiano, San Mateo, as representative at large.

In addition to these members, the chairman of the board of supervisors, County Surveyor James S. James and District Attorney Franklin Swart will act as ex-officio members. Chairman Francis will be chairman of the planning commission.

The ordinance creating the new commission and granting it authority to operate was passed about a month ago by the board, after it had been prepared by District Attorney Swart. At the meeting Monday plans were made for the first session of the new commission just as soon as Supervisor Thompson names his candidate from his district.

At the meeting Monday afternoon the supervisors heard a plea from Mayor H. H. Smith for county aid in the elimination of the bottleneck at San Jose avenue and Mission street in Daly City.

Mayor Smith said the elimination of the traffic hazard would cost about $750,000, and the state had promised some $300,000, provided the county, Daly City and San Francisco raised the balance for the needed project. He urged the county to help with the project and make it possible to get the aid promised by the state.

The supervisors delayed action on Mayor Smith's request until such time as the new budget is complete.

The board also heard a request from the San Mateo County Chamber of Commerce that some suitable gift be made to Sunnyvale.

LEGION MEMBERS VISIT SAN MATEO

A number of Daly City Legionaires motored to San Mateo last Tuesday evening to attend the big Army night which was participated in by all Posts of San Mateo county. There were present a number of city officials and state officers of the Legion. Speeches were limited to one, an address by State Commander "Bud" Gearhart. He held the attention of his audience to a man by his eloquence. The remainder of the evening was spent in typical army reminiscenses, portrayed by various vaudeville and monologue acts of high order. Needless to say it was a most pleasant evening and the final touch was in the form of refreshments to satisfy the inner man.

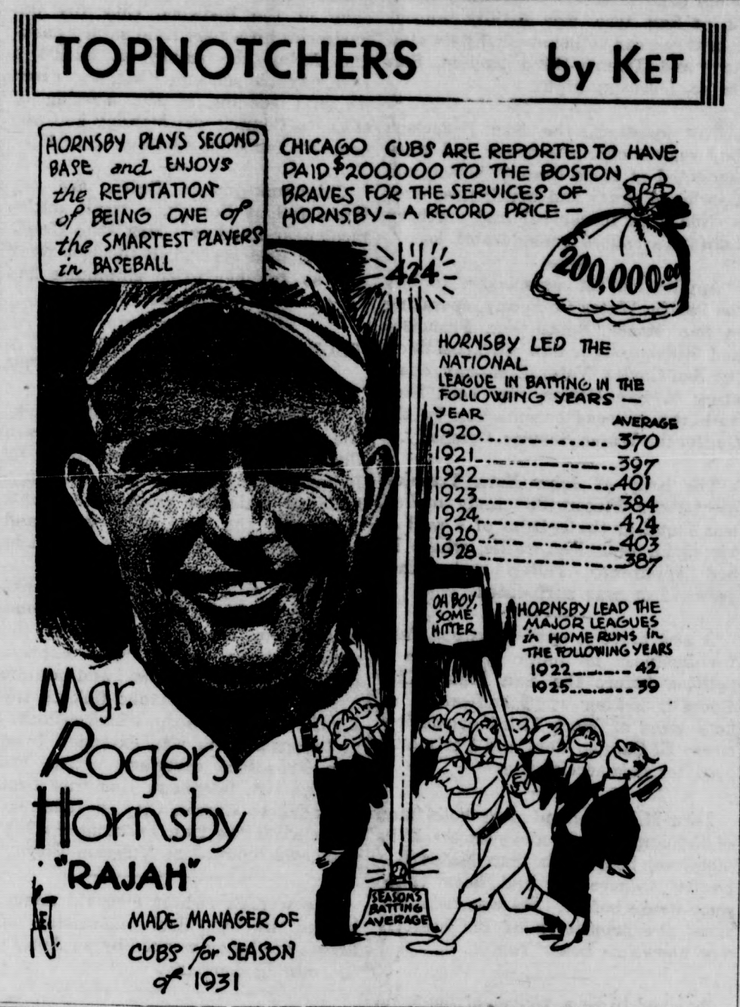

The members of the Ladies' Auxiliary, American Legion Post No. 410, held their business meeting last Friday, July 3. Due to vacations, all social activities have been postponed until August. The next meeting will be held on July 17. All members are requested to be present.

OLD GLORY POST NOTES

The ladies of Old Glory Post No. 2044 met at the home of Mr. and Mrs. Dane Refatti, on Camille avenue, on Wednesday evening of last week for the purpose of organizing a ladies' drill team. Post Commander Merle Nesby was appointed drill master.

Upon the adjournment of the business meeting, the members enjoyed the remainder of the evening playing indoor games. Delicious refreshments were served at a late hour by the hostess and her committee.

Comrade Dave Refatti of Old Glory Post No. 2044 extended an invitation to the members of the Post at their last meeting to enjoy his hospitality at his country home, Seldom Inn, in the heart of the Santa Cruz mountains, over the Independence day holidays. Among the members who gladly accepted Mr. Refatti's hospitality were Mr. and Mrs. Webb Allen and family, Mr. and Mrs. W. F. Dorn, Mr. and Mrs. Harold Rice, Vernon Fitzgerald and two nephews, Mr. and Mrs. Merle Nesby, Mr. and Mrs. B. Pangburn and children, Mr. and Mrs. Jack Lewis, Miss Olivia Refatti, Mrs. M. Schiavi and Fillipe Schiavi. All who attended this gathering felt well repaid for their time spent in playing barnyard golf, swimming and dancing. Music was provided for dancing by Fillipe Schiavi, a young boy who surely does know his notes on the accordion.

BOARD HOLDS UP RACE ORDINANCE

An ordinance regulating the establishment and maintenance of racetracks in San Mateo county was presented to the San Mateo county board of supervisors last Monday by District Attorney Franklin Swart.

The board declined to act immediately upon District Attorney Swart's measure, and it was decided to study the ordinance during the next three weeks and take action at the first meeting in August.

For the purpose of the ordinance, a race track is defined as "any enclosure or any place where contests of speed or endurance of, or between, beasts, animals or mechanical apparatus are conducted, or any enclosure or place established for carrying out those purposes."

The ordinance makes it unlawful to conduct a race track where races are held on more than three days in any week, or more than six days in any one month. In other words, it would be impossible for a new enterprise to conduct a meet of more than three consecutive racing days.

It prohibits a track where any purse or prize in excess of $100 is offered to any contestant, or to accept a prize of more than $100. It also prohibits anybody entering any animal of mechanical device in any race in which a prize of more than $100 is offered.

The ordinance provides that a racing outfit must first procure a permit to operate from the board of supervisors, and if the board determines, after a public hearing, that the racetrack will not be detrimental to the community in which it is located, a permit may be granted for not more than three months.

ACCIDENT BLAMED FOR DEATH OF 7-YEAR-OLD DALY CITY BOY

Bennie Thor, 7-year-old son of Mr. and Mrs. M. Thor, of 166 Shakespeare street, had the misfortune to bump into a three-inch water pipe, receiving a serious injury, several weeks ago. Benny was removed to St. Luke's hospital on July 2, and while there Dr. Ansbrough treated him. On the morning of July 4, at 1:15 P. M., Bennie passed away, a victim of pneumonia. Last Monday morning the funeral was conducted from the mortuary chapel of W. C. Lasswell & Co., at 9:45. Mass was celebrated in Our Lady of Perpetual Help church and interment was in Holy Cross cemetery.

The many friends of the family are extending their deepest sympathy in their hour of sorrow and great loss.

CELEBRATES SIXTH BIRTHDAY

Little Sarah Compagno, of Brunswick street, celebrated her sixth birthday at her home last Monday, a party being given in her honor. Sarah received many lovely gifts from her guests, among whom were Virginia Aiello, Nancy Battigleri, Marvin Bodin, Teresa Compagno, Marie Gardner, Sarah Gardner, Joe and Tony Battigleri, Mrs. F. Aiello, Mrs. G. George and Mrs. N. Battigleri.

JAIL SITE REQUEST BEING CONSIDERED

The city of San Francisco, seeking to establish its new jail on a portion of the Sneath ranch in San Mateo county, presented its petition before the board of supervisors at Redwood City last Monday. The San Mateo county board of supervisors agreed to publish a "notice of intention of San Francisco to purchase a site for a county jail in San Mateo county."

This notice is to be published three times, and calls for a public hearing before the supervisors on August 3, when protests of San Mateo county improvement clubs and associations and individual citizens to the location of the jail in San Mateo county will be heard.

Sheriff W. J. Fitzgerald of San Francisco, heading the San Francisco board's delegation to Redwood City, explained that this procedure was necessary before San Francisco could make formal request for application to build the jail. The cost of the site, located a half mile west of the Skyline boulevard near San Bruno, is $47,500, Fitzgerald said.

The board, at its session Monday, agreed to underwrite the fall flower show of the Burlingame-San Mateo Garden and Flower Club, to the extent of $1,000. The request was for $2,000. Supervisor Thomas L. Hickey objected on the ground that underwriting the show would "set a bad precedent."

HAPPY RAMBLERS CLUB MEMBERS ENJOY OUTING

With banners flying, the Happy Ramblers motored to Tunitas Beach to celebrate the Fourth of July. On Friday night a huge bonfire was made and a weenie roast held. On Saturday night the splendor of the fireworks held by the club illuminated the beach for a mile. On Sunday, after a good catch of fifty perch, the Ramblers departed for home. Those enjoying the outing were Mr. and Mrs. H. Thomas, Mr. and Mrs. S. Hamberg, Mr. and Mrs. A. Vishnevsky, Mr. and Mrs. H. Rudolph, Miss B. Glazier, Mr. R. Glazier, Mr. and Mrs. M. Koerner, Miss M. Sully, Mr. T. Halverson, Mr. and Mrs. G. Openshaw, Mr. R. Openshaw, Mr. W. Zari, Mr. M. McCloud, Mr. and Mrs. W. Snelling, Doris Hamberg and Leon Openshaw.

THUGS ATTEMPT TO ABDUCT MENLO PARK RESIDENT

A search is being conducted by officers of the peninsula for four men who early Monday drove into the ranch of John Britschgi, near the Flood estate in Menlo Park, posed as Federal agents looking for a still, and attempted to kidnap Britschgi. The screams of Mrs. Britschgi brought her two sons to the scene and attracted the attention of passing motorists who stopped and prepared to lend aid. Realizing that they were in a dangerous position, the four thugs pushed Britschgi from their car and sped away. They had told the captured man that they intended "to take him for a ride."

LOCAL NINE WINS AND LOSES GAME

The Daly City Merchants' nine chalked up a 20 to 5 victory over the Mission Reds "B," Saturday, on the Jefferson diamond, and dropped a 5 to 2 contest to the Mission Reds "A," Sunday, on Rolph playground.

Celebrating the Fourth with a dynamic batting spree, the local team collected 19 hits in four separate rallies. Joe Albrecht touched the B's hurler, Carroll, for four bingles in five trips to the plate; while Walsh and Keagle garnered a home run apiece.

Paul Bonetti received the credit for this victory, pitching his first game in several months. He did not have to bear down at any stage of the contest, using a slow curve effectively.

Sunday's game was a pitcher's battle between Keagle and Bauman after the first inning. During the initial frame the Red's clouted Gene's offerings on four occasions to score four runs; from then on he was invincible.

The Merchants' batters caused "Lefty" Bauman plenty of trouble, but were unable to score in more than one frame. The Mission fielders accorded their pitcher perfect support, turning in several spectacular plays at dangerous moments. No matter where the local players hit the ball, there was usually a man on the spot to catch it.

Four double plays were marked down during this fast moving tussle. The Reds completed two twin killings, as did Daly City. Both of the A's duplicate outs were made with two men on base, during the fifth and sixth innings. Bauman was very wild in each stanza. He had walked two batters in the fifth and one in the following frame.

Due to the absence of Plansky and Trowbridge, the local nine was weak in the outfield. Had either of these experienced players been on hand, a closer contest would have been witnessed. Paul Bonetti, a good pitcher, was unfamiliar with the Rolph right field and failed to catch a fly ball that resulted in two runs.

Manager Cavagnaro acquired the services of Ed Rose, Louis' Repair second baseman, for these two games, and he performed very efficiently. Ed collected a hit in each contest, besides playing errorless ball on the field.

MANY MEET DEATH DURING HOLIDAYS

Twenty persons met death and at least fifteen are suffering from injuries as a result of a series of airplane, automobile, drowning and other accidents in the San Francisco bay region and central California last Sunday.

A woman and five men, including three noted golfers, were killed near Lucerne, Lake county, when the airplane in which they were riding crashed into a wooded canyon as the motor failed. The dead were: Mrs. Sigmunda Lax, Long Beach; George Ritchie, former San Francisco golf champion; John Kerrigan, San Francisco golf star; Leon Keller, former Los Angeles amateur golf champion; Louis M. Becker, millionaire Lake county land owner and former Los Angeles realtor; and William H. Hoffman, Berkeley, pilot of the airplane.

In another air crash at San Rafael, three persons were injured when their airplane overturned in landing. The injured were Marc Worst, of Watsonville, the pilot, his sister, Martha Worst, and Harold Painter, of Watsonville.

Eight persons were killed in automobile accidents in Sonoma, Santa Clara, Alameda and Stanislaus counties. James Murray, charged with reckless driving is under arrest at Santa Rosa, following an automobile collision which cost the life of Miss Mabel Johanson, of Salt Lake City, and resulted in serious injuries to James Maxwell, of San Francisco.

At Antioch, John Rizzo, an Emeryville city fireman, and his 5-year-old son were drowned when Rizzo, with the boy on his shoulders, stepped into a deep hole while swimming in the San Joaquin river. Another child, James Lackey, was drowned near Modesto when he fell in the river. Miss Bonnie Fish, of Berkeley, was killed at an Alameda amusement park when she fell 50 feet from a car of a roller coaster.

Plan Chrysanthemum Show

Carl Wagner, Redwood City banker, has accepted the position of chairman of the budget and finance committee of the Redwood City chrysanthemum festival to be held October 3 under the direction of the Chamber of Commerce.

MILLION GAIN IN PROPERTY VALUE

Cities of San Mateo county showed a gain of over half a million dollars in value, and the county as a whole a gain of almost a million dollars in real estate and personal property values during the last year, according to the 1931-32 assessment roll of County Assessor Dan P. Flynn, which was adopted by the board of supervisors at Redwood City last Monday. The supervisors will sit as a board of equalization during the next ten days.

The total valuation of cities on the new assessment roll is $33,225,990, showing an increase of $639,443 over the figure for 1930-31, which was $32,596,547. The total valuation of cities and townships is $50,557,190, compared with the 1930-31 total of $49,616,049, an increase of exactly $941,141.

The grand total of San Mateo county, including railroads, operative property and stocks, bonds and solvent credits (the last named representing $15,000,000), is $68,782,690. This is a substantial increase over the 1930-31 figure, according to Assessor Flynn.

The new Fourth township of Burlingame, represented by Supervisor C. V. Thompson, has a valuation of $2,853,450, or a million dollars more than Thompson's old Fourth district on the coastside, which was valued at $1,777,480 on the 1930-31 roll.

The new Fifth district, comprising the old Fifth and Fourth districts, is actually valued at less than the old Fifth, despite nearly twice as much territory. The new Fifth is valued at $1,001,450, while the old Fifth was valued at $1,063,815 in the last roll.

These are the first valuations since the redistricting of the county.

The city of San Mateo showed an increase of $217,975 in the new roll. The new value of this city is $6,750,150. In 1930-31 it was $6,532,175.

The city of Burlingame enjoys a slight increase, as does Redwood City. The new valuation follows:

Daly City	$ 1,630,525
Lawndale	531,250
South San Francisco	2,527,350

First township	$ 4,584,750
Second township	2,310,800

Total value of cities	$33,225,990
Total value of townships	17,331,200
Operative roll	3,225,500
Total value county	$ 53,782,690
Stocks, bonds and solvent credits	15,000,000
Grand total	$ 68,782,690

HINMAN RESIGNS FROM REDWOOD CITY COUNCIL

County Clerk Elmore B. Hinman has presented his resignation as a member of the Redwood City Council, to become effective on August 15, when his successor will be named by the board. Mr. Hinman was named to the City Council May 5, 1930, to succeed Z. T. Thorne. Mr. Hinman announced that he was forced to resign his councilmanic post by August 15, because at that time the county government bill, sponsored by Assemblyman Harry Parkman, becomes effective. This bill prohibits county officials from holding other public offices where there is a salary attached.

The fire loss in the United States during 1930 totaled $465,000,000, which amount is 10 per cent greater than in 1929.

ETALO MARKET TEAM VERSUS MERCHANTS

The Etalo Market nine, rated one of the three fastest teams in San Francisco, will display its ability for the local fans next Sunday. They will oppose the Daly City Merchants on the Jefferson high school diamond. Game time is 2:30.

Manager Ed Cavagnaro hopes to have the local team strengthened for this contest. He is trying to sign a good second baseman and a hard-hitting outfielder.

Gene Keagle and Paul Bonetti, Daly City pitchers, are working out every day. They will have to be in perfect condition to stop the Market aggregation. The visitors have defeated the Ponce Club and Gaddini Bulldogs in recent tussles. That is quite an achievement.

VETERAN FIREMEN HAVE AN INTERESTING SESSION

The members of the Veteran Firemen's Association held a meeting on Friday evening, July 3, at their hall, there being a gratifying attendance and a very interesting and enthusiastic meeting.

It was ordered that the American flag be hoisted on the building in observance of Independence day, Comrade Kastor volunteering to see that this was done.

The Veteran Firemen's picnic committee made a report which would indicate that the picnic will be a success in every way.

The Association is to have a new ritual for initiations, a committee consisting of Comrades H. H. Smith and Edward J. Ford, to act with the board of directors of the Association, having the work in charge.

At the close of the business session refreshments were served by the social committee.

SEARCH BEING MADE FOR MISSING INSURANCE MAN

Search is being made in the vicinty of Salada Beach for Theodore L. Greilich, 35, San Francisco insurance agent, who is believed to have committed suicide. Three notes, one written to his wife and two others to business associates, intimated that he contemplated taking his life and hinted that financial matters may have prompted the act. The abandoned car, with insurance books and notes in the front seat, was found parked off the Skyline boulevard about a mile south of the county line by William Winters, Salada Beach.

GOVERNOR CONSIDERING APPLICANTS FOR JUDGESHIP

A Sacramento dispatch says applications for sixteen new Los Angeles superior and municipal judgeships continue to swell Governor Rolph's mail. It is estimated that the number of applicants for the twelve superior judgeships and four municipal court posts, authorized by the last legislature, has already passed the 1,200 mark.

Although the bills creating the additional judges is not effective until August 14, Governor Rolph expects to make his selections before the end of the month.

L. D. S. STAKE CONFERENCE

The San Francisco stake will hold its quarterly conference in the L. D. S. chapel on Moss and Webster street, Oakland, next Saturday night at 7:30 o'clock, and on Sunday at 10 A. M. and 2 P. M.

The closing session will be held at 7:30 Sunday in the chapel at 1649 Hayes street. Apostle Joseph Fielding Smith, of Salt Lake City, Utah, will be in attendance at all sessions. Everyone is welcome.

Plan Autopsy on Bay Victim

An autopsy is planned to determine the cause of the death of John E. Lloyd, wealthy Piedmont garage owner, whose body was found in San Francisco bay near the Ferry building in San Francisco, after he had been missing a week.

If the proposed San Francisco jail is located on the Sneath property in a canyon west of Skyline boulevard, where it will not be visible from the highway, San Bruno business men will not oppose the site. This decision was reached at a meeting of the San Bruno Business Men's Association.

ODDS AND ENDS OF WEEK'S NEWS

The heavy traffic of the past week end resulted in one death and twenty-six motorists injured in San Mateo county, during Saturday and Sunday, according to a check of hospitals and police departments. Miss Mary Bent, 22, of San Jose, was fatally injured in a three car collision on El Camino Real and Twenty-third avenue, San Mateo, Saturday night.

Fire losses in the San Francisco Bay region over the week end were estimated at more than $250,000, and a series of grass and brush fires over a wide area in central and northern California caused considerable loss.

Application for permission to buy the Pacific Water Company, operating in San Mateo, South San Francisco and Hillsborough, and its subsidiary, the San Carlos Water Company, operating in San Carlos, has been filed with the railroad commission by the California Water Service Company.

The body of John Ezra Tressler, 55, former Placerville candy maker, was found at the bottom of a well at his ranch near Placerville, where he had apparently fallen and either drowned or was suffocated.

A new move to open Baywood Park for business is under way with a petition before the San Mateo City Council, asking re-classification of both sides of West Third avenue between El Camino Real and Dartmouth road for commercial use.

John M. Rowell, pioneer hotel man of Belmont, passed away at the Mills Memorial hospital in San Mateo last Sunday, where he had been taken some weeks before. He was for many years the proprietor of the hostelry now known as Louis' Inn.

Believed to be a victim of amnesia, James H. Dingwell, retired official of the Chicago Title and Abstract Company, was taken from a plane at Omaha while enroute to Chicago after spending a year's visit with his brother, William H. Dingwell, in San Mateo.

It is announced that the Leslie Salt Company's plant at San Mateo will be closed in the near future, and the company's operations transferred to Alvarado. The reason for the move is said to be economy in operation.

An ordinance placing Mark Ryan, chief of the Redwood City fire department, on a part time salary basis, and fixing the salary at $2,400 a year, payable semi-monthly, was given its first reading at the meeting of the City Council last Monday and will come up for final adoption July 17.

TELEPHONE OFFICE STANDS ON HISTORIC NEVADA SITE

On the site where an adobe stockade once furnished settlers at Carson City, Nevada, refuge from attacks by Indians now stands a new telephone building which is one of the most modern in the state of Nevada, and which will serve Carson City and vicinity.

Carson City holds an important place in the history of early-day communication, for it was one of the main stations on the pony express route in the early sixties, and became a still further important link to the Pacific coast when the transcontinental telegraph line was extended from San Francisco eastward across the Sierras. A telephone line was first extended to Carson City in 1888, six years after the first exchange in Nevada was opened at Virginia City.

THREE UNITED STATES PRESIDENTS DIED ON JULY 4

One historic fact relating to July 4 is seldom remembered in our annual observance of Independence day, we are informed by the division of information and publication of the United States George Washington Bicentennial Commission. This is especially strange because this historic fact has touching and dramatic meaning. July 4 is the day on which three Presidents of the United States died.

Each of these three early Presidents played a prominent part in the very foundation of our government, and each received, as a reward from the people, elevation to their highest office. Having performed great labors in planning the theory of our government, it fell to their lot to set noble examples in putting the theory into pracical effect.

These three presidents were John Adams, Thomas Jefferson, and James Monroe. Indeed, John Adams and Thomas Jefferson died almost the same hour on July 4, 1826. After many sharp differences of opinion, which had divided them during a part of their lives, Adams and Jefferson became not only reconciled but closely attached friends. The correspondence of their final years is one of the glories of American letters. Adams lived to be 90, Jefferson 83. Neither knew how close to death was the other, and Adams' last words, when conscious that death was near, are said to have been, "Thomas Jefferson still lives." But Thomas Jefferson was already dead.

Before their Presidency, both these great men served as Vice-President, and one of them Vice-President while the other was President. The older man, John Adams, was Vice-President under George Washington himself. All three were closely associated with Washington during our formative days, and to one of them, John Adams, goes the credit of playing a major part in throwing George Washington into the arms of destiny.

It was largely the action of John Adams that led the Continental Congress to appoint George Washington as commander-in-chief of the Revolutionary forces. Before that time Washington had been an outstanding sectional figure, a man of the South. In command of the Continental forces he became a man of the country, and history knows full well how he played the part.

James Monroe, a younger man, appeared on the scene of action after the great political groundwork of founding the nation had been accomplished. But as a young man he played a gallant part on the field of battle, as a follower of Washington. Strange to say, he at first opposed the Constitution of the United States, and, as a member of the Virginia convention, elected to act on adoption of the Constitution, he voted against it. Yet he lived to become the President who ennunciated a doctrine that statesmen regard as no less a settled rule of American policy that the Constitution itself. James Monroe died on July 4, 1831. But the "Monroe Doctrine" is immortal.

THE SMOOTHNESS OF AN EIGHT
. . . THE ECONOMY OF A FOUR

WALTER P. CHRYSLER ANNOUNCES
$535 AND UP · F.O.B. FACTORY

NEW PLYMOUTH
FLOATING POWER
. . and FREE WHEELING

To produce in 1931 an achievement in motor car design, engineering and pricing so revolutionary that it transcends every previous standard of quality, performance and value in the field of lowest price is to challenge the world.

That is precisely what the New Plymouth does.

For years, while designing fine Sixes and Eights for Chrysler, Dodge and De Soto, Chrysler Motors engineers have worked unceasingly for the perfected Four.

Now they give you the results of their labors and discoveries—

The New Plymouth, a quality car of lowest price with the Smoothness of an Eight and the Economy of a Four—due to Plymouth's exclusive Floating Power.

Here is power unshackled, yet power as smooth as satin, as soft as velvet. Here is power without vibration—literally floating; power so silken that even experts could not name the number of cylinders under the Plymouth hood, and many guessed the New Plymouth to be an Eight.

Plymouth now also gives you Free Wheeling which makes it possible to shift gears between all forward speeds without declutching.

Besides Free Wheeling Plymouth offers a new Easy-Shift transmission which makes it possible to shift not only from second to high at speeds of 35 or 45 miles an hour but back into second at these speeds, when you need sudden acceleration, without clashing or grinding.

The new Plymouth engine develops 56 brake-test horsepower — with actual stop-watch speed of 65 to 70 miles per hour; pick-up from 0 to 40 miles in 9.7 seconds.

Among all cars in the lowest-price field, only Plymouth has weather-proof hydraulic brakes—simplest and unexcelled for safety and smoothness.

Chrysler Motors engineers have given Plymouth a double-drop frame. Plymouth has a still lower center of gravity, still greater safety, still greater riding ease, still finer style.

We believe the new Plymouth establishes in the field of lowest price a new degree of artistic advancement with new eye-compelling beauty of line and color.

Plymouth challenges with full-size Safety-Steel body, with wire wheels standard, with hydraulic shock absorbers. No feature of comfort, of reliability, of economy has been left out of the New Plymouth.

I am happy to extend to the entire motoring world a cordial welcome to see, to drive and to ride in the New Plymouth, and to invite comparison between this exceptional product of Chrysler Motors engineering and any car in the world at or near its price.

THE STORY

Harold Norman Atridge, an orphan, lives with his great-aunt Matilda, who reared him. At her death he finds himself penniless. At the close of the war he gets work in a bank. Tennis is his only recreation. Taking a message to Marjorie Clarence, he finds her father in the throes of delirium tremens. Harold is badly bunged up in trying to quiet the old man.

All his pleasant neutral habits had been upset. He had missed some hours of his usual nine hours' sleep; he had missed his train; he had missed his breakfast. He had borrowed money. He had excited gossip in Scae Fell View. And—great Scott? The club! He had forgotten the club! A dozen members of the club had seen him off at seven o'clock to call for Miss Clarence. The last of them would leave about nine-thirty, and during the interval nothing would have been seen of Mr. Atridge nor of Miss Clarence. His very clothes were still dangling in the club dressing room! Harold knew what that club was like. He knew that half the members would draw conclusions, and he knew that half the rest would allow their conclusions to be drawn for them. He knew that in the evening excited gossip would be flying from lip to lip. Harold groaned at the vivid mental picture.

As an afterthought there was Miss Clarence to consider. She would not like gossip about herself, either. Certainly nothing could be said about her father having delirium tremens. Harold's limited inventive power could not possibly devise a story which would explain all the circumstances and suppress any reference to delirium tremens while at the same time leaving no food for thought to a nasty mind. What could he say? Harold pressed his burning forehead and tried to concentrate on the knotty point.

Concentration, however, was difficult, for there continually flitted across the mental screen of Harold's visualizations things which had no place there at all. Two little white butterflies came and went, darting into the picture and out again in distracting fashion. Two tiny white hands they were, very frail, slim-fingered, cool-palmed. Sometimes they pillowed a pathetic little head drooping with weariness. Sometimes instead they were being daintily, amazingly efficient with cups and saucers. Tiny fingers. Little pink nails.

Harold pulled himself up with a jerk. What in the world did he think he was up to? He had never thought about any portion of any girl before; he had never even bothered to look sidelong at girls' legs as they went by on bicycles. Far less had he ever caught himself thinking about pink fingernails.

But he was in no mood whatever for self-analysis, and the habit was foreign in him anyway, so that his thoughts went off once more at a tangent, abruptly. Today was Friday, and he must remember to draw his usual week's money—especially as he had very little of Danvers' half-crown left. Mrs. Pound would present her bill in the morning. Usually Harold looked forward to this. He could never help feeling a tingle of conscious pride as he paid it, fishing the pound notes nonchalantly out of his pocketbook and adding the exact silver. But Harold was not looking forward to tomorrow's function. He had a black eye and a blotted 'scutcheon, and he was not looking forward to anything in particular.

And he had promised Miss Clarence to call at Hillbrow crescent that evening. He didn't know really why he had promised it; he was not in the habit of calling on girls; and a thousand times not in the habit of calling on girls who were likely to be alone in the house because their father might be in hospital with D. T's. But Miss Clarence would not think about that side of it, of course. She was too innocent and trusting. Just a little child, in fact—it was absurd to keep on thinking of her as Miss Clarence. She was Marjorie, of course. A little child—Harold thought of her as she had lain worn out on her bed the night before. It was lunch time before he left off thinking about her, and even then he was sublimely unconscious of the fact that the memory had consumed two whole hours of the time for which the bank paid him.

He added another item to the list of things he had done which he had never done before in his life. He left the office early, having reached it late. At twenty minutes to five he pushed aside the deposit ledgers (now nearly a whole day behindhand) and left his desk. He gained his hat unobserved, and sidled out of the office. He was jangled and sleepy and cross and nervous and irritable. He felt that another five minutes in the office would make him scream the roof off. The deposit ledgers were hideously repulsive to him.

But there was method as well as blind nervous irritation about Harold's evasion. For he arrived at Scae Fell View half an hour before dinner time, and, without wasting a moment, he dashed upstairs, grasped his tennis bag, and dashed out again. Five minutes later the still empty courts of the Morley Park Tennis club saw a furtive arrival. He scuttled into the pavilion. Then in furious haste he stuffed his bag with the clothes which hung on the hooks in the dressing room—a neat blue serge suit with a block stripe, neat black shoes and socks, plain white linen shirt and cellular underwear. Then with bulging bag he scuttled out again, back to Scae Fell View. Harold had succeeded in getting his clothes away from the club without being subject to questionings. He could stay away, now, until the possibility of such questionings elapsed.

Dinner time arrived at Scae Fell View. Mrs. Pound sat at the foot of her long dining table, serving cold beef to her six gentlemen lodgers.

"Quite a good black eye, that," said Marks, professionally, to Danvers, looking across to where Harold sat at Mrs. Pound's left hand.

Harold said nothing, but waited patiently for the maid to reach him with the vegetables.

"It's the quiet ones that are always the worst," said Mason. "We'll have him ringing up one night to get us to bail him out."

"Now we can guess where he gets to in the evenings," said Brierly. "It isn't always tennis, that's clear."

"One good binge deserves another," said Owen (alias Puddingface the Unpleasant) on Harold's left.

"I'm sure we've talked about it quite enough," interposed Mrs. Pound "and if everybody behaved as well as Mr. Atridge the world would be a better place, I'm sure."

Conversation died a sudden death, but Harold, sitting blushing at his corner of the table, knew that it only awaited a further stimulus to rise from the dead; he knew that he was, unwontedly, the center of amused attention, and he hated it.

And then at last every one scraped back his chair, and cigarettes came into evidence. Dinner was over. Harold did not dally with the others. Not he. The very thought of remaining with them roused him to panic. Hoping he did not show this panic, but actually displaying it in every movement, he fished out half-a-crown and tossed it onto the table at Danvers.

"There's your half-crown. Thanks," he said, and with that he was out of the dining room and into the hall quicker than lightning. One grab for his hat, and he was out of the front door. Being the center of interest in that sort of way was not in the least to the liking of Harold Norman Atridge.

He had promised to go to Hillbrow crescent and see Miss Clarence. Suddenly he became aware that he did not really want to go to Miss Clarence. Everything seemed to be warning him against it, his instincts, his sense of propriety, his natural caution. He was quite sure in his mind that were his Great-aunt Matilda alive again she would disapprove very strongly of any connection with Miss Clarence. Of a sudden he became aware that all his moonings and imaginings of the day had unfitted him for an encounter with her in the flesh. Harold dreaded the change in his affairs which he felt acutely conscious she would bring about (the process had begun already; was not the club barred to him?); he was shy of meeting her; if there was anywhere else where he could go he would go there at once. And then Harold found that his legs on their own initiative had brought him to the gate of number forty Hillbrow crescent. He was so surprised that the next thing he found himself doing was knocking at the door.

Some seconds elapsed, and then Miss Clarence opened it to him.

"Good evening," she said.

"Good evening," said Harold.

They stood and looked at each other for a space.

"Won't you come in?" said Miss Clarence, a little tardily.

"Thank you," said Harold.

Buddhist Cave Temples

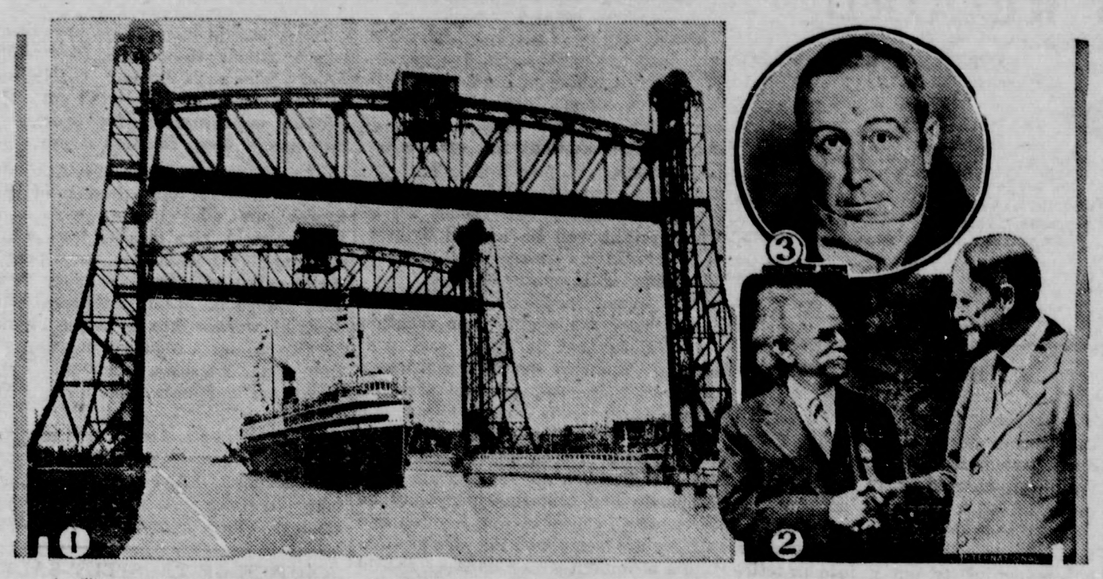

Though the Ceylon Buddhists did not make such fine cave temples as their fellow religionists in India, there are several which are of more than passing interest. One very curious example is to be found at Dambulla, not far from Kandy, where natural caves have been enlarged, and huge images have been carved in the interior. But modern structures have been built in front of these caves, thus spoiling the whole conception. The whitewashed brick walls seem very incongruous in the vicinity of ancient cave temples, which are probably nearly two thousand years old.

Valuable Food Experiments

The value of laboratory experiments in the field of foods is pointed out by Lawrence H. Baker in Hygeia Magazine. In natural forms the substance that benefits the human body is often mixed with harmful impurities that may retard its action when taken into the human body.

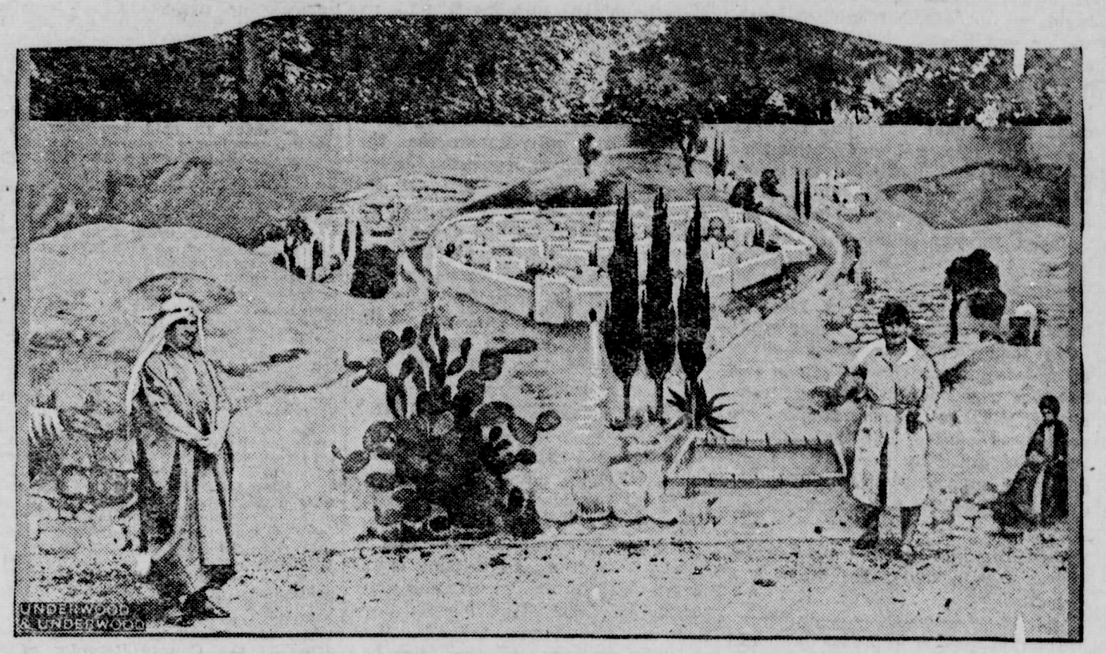

As soon as a plant or animal tissue is found to yield a substance possessing medicinal value, scientists and the atom chasers seek to isolate the active principles and to reduce them to their utmost simplicity.

SEA FAIRIES

The sand fairies went rushing out to the sea fairies. The sea fairies laughed as they fell right over them with their boats of foam in which they were riding.

"Ah," said the sea fairies, "aren't you glad you joined us? Our boats are going so well today.

"There are no boats in the world like the breaker boats."

"They seem to have rather rough names," said the sand fairies. "Of course," said the sea fairies, "and they are good and rough, too.

"Although of course it is the ocean that helps. These boats will not come out unless the ocean is just right.

"When the ocean is just right they do what the ocean tells them to do.

"We think old Mother Ocean is pretty powerful. She rules the waves.

"She rules the breakers. And she rules the boats which we call the breaker boats.

"Some people just call them breakers, and others call them high waves or angry waves, or waves covered with whitecaps and foam."

"Here, here, here," whistled a voice from above. It was the voice of old Mr. Wind.

"Now, don't you start saying that Mother Ocean does all the work. I do some of it myself.

"I am a friend of Mother Ocean, I am, and I like to help her."

"Oh dear, oh dear," laughed the sea

"Enjoy Yourselves."

fairies. "The wind must always get some praise, too."

"Of course I must," said the wind. "There are so many people who abuse me.

"They talk about the 'frightful wind,' and the 'terrible wind' and the 'great gale' that I am blowing up."

"Oh, well, well," said the sea fairies, "you can't please every one. We're satisfied, so that's enough praise for you today, Mr. Wind.

"And we know you help Mother Ocean. But we like to tease you sometimes by giving Mother Ocean all the praise.

"It never fails to make you very angry."

"I suppose that is what you like," said Mr. Wind.

"Of course," said the sea fairies. "Then you blow up into a rage and we have more fun than ever, and the breaker boats go so wonderfully."

"I should say they did," said one poor little sand fairy, who had been knocked over and over all the time by the sea fairies."

But she really didn't mind. It had all been quite jolly. The sea fairies wore their fluffy white dresses and their green shoes and stockings. Such gorgeous green shoes and stockings as they were.

And their collars and hats were like glorious white ruffles—all made by Mother Ocean.

All of the sea fairies were now back in their boats and how the breaker boats did toss and break! They roared with the fun, and the low, deep voice of Mother Ocean murmured all the time:

"That is right, my children. Enjoy yourselves. You are so beautiful, so young and so active. It does my old watery heart good to see you."

And the sea faries went on rolling back and forth in their breaker boats.

And as they went they played with the sand fairies on the beach.

THOSE WILD STUDENTS

Although we do not hear so much about the wildness of youth, and particularly college youth, as we did a year or two ago, when it was the fashion to insist that the younger generation was going to the dogs, there are still many who look upon our young people with apprehension.

It may be in some small degree reassuring to these to know what some of our college students are really doing in the way of serious preparation for the duties and responsibilities of life.

It may be satisfying for them to know that one-third of the entire student body at Yale is either wholly or partly self-supporting, through earnings outside of school hours. During one year these earnings totalled $593,679.67, of which $350,856.17 were from work during the school term and $242,823.50 during the summer vacation.

Among the occupations which enabled these students to earn their way were those of artist's model, bookkeeper, caretaker, chauffeur, clerk, entertainer, gardner, guide, messenger, reader, tutor, translator, mechanic and others. Some acted as salesmen for various commodities, one having earned more than $4,000 during the year, another $3,000, four earned more than $2,000 each 28 earned between $1,000 and $2,000 and 135 earned more than $500.

When such a large percentage of college students show the industry to make spare money earnings like these in addition to keeping up their exacting school work, it does not appear that modern youth is so frivolous, after all.

It takes a lot of practice to make a saxophone do its worst.

BUY HOME PRODUCTS

Campaigns having for their object the encouragement of buying products manufactured near at home have been carried on in various communities with varying success for many years. Nearly everyone agrees that the idea is sound in principle, but many fail to put it into practice when their time comes to buy.

Any small local industry which manufactures a worthy product and sells it at a reasonable price might be enabled to grow large through the loyal support of home people. Its growth would enable it to increase its payrolls, increase its consumption of locally produced raw materials, build up increased taxable wealth, and in every way contribute to the progress and prosperity of its community.

These are trite and self-evident facts which have been put forward time and again, yet many otherwise good citizens deliberately contribute to the upbuilding of distant cities at the expense of their own towns and counties, through failing to patronize home industries and mercantile establishments.

The simple policy of buying at home would do more for the average town than can be accomplished by all the commercial organizations and boosters' clubs which may be maintained. These organizations are needed, of course, but their efforts should be aided by the all-important policy of supporting the enterprises already present in the community.

Two Brooklyn men traded wives and now each thinks the other is a swindler.

Tolerant people concede the right of others to make fools of themselves.

GUARD CHILD'S VACATION

Vacation time is a happy time, but it is also fraught with danger, especially for children, unless certain simple and common sense precautions are taken for the safeguarding of health. An excellent list of summer suggestions is presented by the children's bureau of the United States Department of Labor, all of which might well be heeded by parents about to leave on summer vacations with their children.

"Be sure," cautions the department, "that you spend your vacation in a house that is clean and well screened, and that the milk and water are safe. Do not let the children drink water from roadside springs. See that the child drinks three or four glasses of cool, unflavored water daily. Fresh-fruit orangeade and lemonade and tomatoe juice may be given also in moderation, but tea and coffee and some bottled drinks contain a stimulant which children should not have.

"Use no raw milk. If pasteurized milk is unobtainable, boil the raw milk. Do not buy food for children from street carts or from counters where it has been exposed to dirt, dust and flies. Give the children plenty of fresh, green, leafy vegetables and ripe, fresh fruits. Every child should be outdoors five to six hours daily, except on rainy or very windy days."

When one considers that one of the delights of a vacation lies in the psychological reaction of letting down the bars, it is only human that the change from the daily routine of living may also result in the individual failing to note some of the dangers that can go with such a change. It is a good thing for the welfare of a community or a nation that there are impersonal forces like the children's bureau on the job to check up on the possibilities of human error, even during carefree vacation time.

DID YOU EVER STOP TO THINK?

By Edson R. Waite, Shawnee, Okla.

W. E. Tomlin, advertisement director of the London, England Daily Express, says:

Did you ever stop to think that in times of bad trade, advertising is one of the chief factors in creating more employment and improving the position of the wage-earner? Most countries are now suffering from bad trade, and the position has got to be faced. No purpose would be served by trying to discover the causes of the present trade depression—it is more important to try to ferret out ways and means of reviving industry and trade.

In Great Britain, for example, it has been found that many firms are suffering badly just because they are waiting for something to turn up, without themselves taking steps to increase their turn-over. We have a large number of unemployed in this country, just as in the United States you have many unfortunate millions who can not find work. Yet, as recent balance sheets prove, those companies which have continued to advertise, and in many cases increased their advertising appropriations, have done splendid business as a result, whilst their less go-ahead competitors are simply languishing. This appreciation of the power and value of advertising has enabled many concerns to keep their product prominently before the public; it has extended their home demand; it has increased the number of workers employed in producing it, and, moreover, it has in a number of cases extended export demand to a surprising extent because of the cheapening of prices achieved through more efficent production.

All this just means that so far as you, the ordinary citizen or householder are concerned, necessities like soap, food, wearing apparel, boots, etc., can be bought at lower prices because the fewer firms that take advantage of advertising, the more they are able to sell and the cheaper it is for each individual purchaser. All of which goes to show that industrial prosperity, based as it is upon the ever widening possibilities of consumption, must make use of advertising as its chief salesman among large populations. When the product has achieved greater popularity and demand as the result of adevrtising, you are able to produce more of it at a lower price and you are also enabled to employ more workers in doing so and to pay them better. Then you find it possible to compete in the markets of the world by offering good quality at the most competitive prices.

This rough idea of how advertising knits up with the processes of producing, buying and selling, should make clear, I think, how important it is, particularly in times like the present. In more cases than meet the eye, wider advertising would solve many of the difficulties that are troubling many concerns.

A new contraption enables a man without vocal chords to sing. A more useful device would be one to fix a fellow with vocal chords so he couldn't.

A physician says a man's health is indicated by the length of time he can hold his breath. And his wisdom by the length of time he can hold his tongue.

WHITE COLLAR JOBS

Boys should be taught to think less of fitting themselves for "white collar" jobs, says Prof. F. G. Nichols of Harvard. who points out the greater opportunities for promotion in industry than in clerical pursuits.

The young man who starts at the bottom in a factory often soon distances one who begins, say as a bookkeeper. The idea is that while the clerk or bookkeeper may have a white collar job from the very first, the ambitious and intelligent industrial worker has a better chance to rise to an executive position, so that when he does reach the white collar job it means something worth while.

Advice along a similar line is given by President Thatcher of the Massachusetts Agricultural College, who defends vocational schools against the reproach sometimes leveled against them by the classical student. He says that "the idea is erroneous that vocational schools are undignified because they work with materials near at hand and not with a knowledge of things that are ancient and far off."

Literally, however, the proportion of white collar jobs is constantly increasing. With the continual advent of new machines for doing the "dirty work" of the world, the time may come when everyone may have a white collar job.

TELEPHONE WORKERS STUDY IN SPARE HOURS

About one-third of the 14,000 employees of the New Jersey Bell Telephone Company attend schools of one kind or another each year. The courses taken by these telephone employees run almost the entire gamut of the educational catalogue and range from technical subjects pertaining largely to the telephone business, to pholosophy and English composition. Some of the classes are conducted as university extension courses, while others are given by experts in the telephone business. Many telephone employees attend night schools at educational institutions in New Jersey or New York City.

MAY GASOLINE TAX OVER FOUR MILLION

California's gasoline tax broke all records for monthly revenue during May when a total levy of $4,002,791.86 was assessed against distributors, it is announced by John C. Corbett, member of the State Board of Equalization from the first district.

Based on sale of 136,339,242.1 gallons of gasoline, the exceptionally large tax was the result of a price war and the beginning of summer travel, according to Corbett.

"California taxpayers can now rest assured that every cent of this amount will go into the state treasury," said Corbett.

"In the past, delinquencies have occurred due to the fact that gasoline taxes were only collected quarterly and there was no bond given by distributors to assure payment. The last Legislature enacted amendments to the motor vehicle fuel act which call for monthly payments and posting of a bond equal to twice the average monthly tax.

"In April the total tax of $3,510,691.00 was paid with the exception of one assessment of $800.00, which is covered by bond.

"It is obvious that we need no longer concern ourselves over delinquencies which in the past have been distressingly large."

Compared with the month of May last year, the revenue for the same month this year has increased by 16,27 per cent. The tax for May, 1930, was computed by striking an everage for the months of April, May and June, as the tax was then collected quarterly.

Refunds to distributors for gasoline exported directly from California during May totaled $46,483.71, which was deducted before arriving at the figure given as the levy for the month, Corbett said.

MUSEUM AN ATTRACTION FOR LASSEN PARK VISITORS

Among the attractive features for motorists to visit when in Lassen Volcanic National Park is the Loomis Memorial Museum, on the edge of Manzanita and Reflection Lakes, at the northwest corner of the park.

Motorists will be directed to the museum during the dedication on July 24, 25 and 26, which marks the completion of the scenic loop highway through the park and the throwing open to the public of its main features. The dedication program is under the sponsorship of the State Chamber of Commerce.

The museum contains panels of enlarged photographs showing the various features of the park and also of the various stages of the 1914 and 1915 eruptions of Lassen Peak. In addition it has mounted specimens of wild life and game in the park and other exhibits of natural objects to be found in the area. Many photographs are done in natural color with a brush by Mrs. B. F. Loomis.

The museum was built by Mr. and Mrs. B. F. Loomis of Viola and Anderson, long time residents of the district and strong supporters of the development of the park area, as a memorial to their only daughter, Mae Loomis, who died in 1920 at the age of 20 years.

NEW PASSING RULES FOR MOTOR VEHICLES

Heretofore the law has provided that a driver who goes to the left side of the highway in order to overtake and pass another vehicle must be able to return to the right side before coming within one hundred feet of an approaching vehicle. The stipulation of a one hundred foot clearance has proved either impracticable or dangerous under certain conditions, according to the legal department of the California State Automobile Association. The legislature amended the law substantially as follows:

Where it is necessary to pass to the left of the center line of the highway, that side must be clearly visible and free of oncoming traffic for a safe distance ahead to permit returning to the right side without interfering with any approaching vehicle or with the vehicle that has been passed. In effect, this amendment leaves to the judgment of the driver the decision whether the clearance is sufficient to pass in safety.

When a driver sounds the horn as a signal of his intention to pass, the driver of the overtaken vehicle is prohibited by law from increasing his speed until the passing has been completed.

On city streets of sufficient width for two or more parallel lanes of traffic in each direction, passing on the right as well as the left will be permitted.

DEPEW'S FIRST FEE

Chauncey M. Depew's reputation as a story-teller was world wide, and it was a marvel to his friends that a busy business man could find time to acquire such a fund of rare humor. Some of his best jokes were told on himself. The story of his first fee as a lawyer is one of them.

Shortly after he had graduated from Yale in 1858, he began the practice of law in his home town, Peekskill, N. Y. His first client was a prosperous farmer who wanted an opinion on a rather complicated matter. Depew gave the case diligent study and gave the farmer his advice. Asked what his fee was, Depew said it would be five dollars, to which the farmer replied: "A dollar and seventy-five cents is enough for a young lawyer like you." The fee was accepted, but the farmer, being not quite satisfied, paid an eminent New York lawyer $500 for an opinion on the matter, receiving the same advice Depew had given him for $1.75.

In later life Mr. Depew said: "In subsequent years I have received several very large retainers, but none of them gave me so much satisfactinon as that dollar and sevent-five cents, which I had actually earned after being so long dependent on my father."

Consumption of English walnuts in the United States has increased about 20 per cent in five years.

HEALTH GYM FOR WOMEN

The business of building up the health and having lots of fun in the process, professionally described as "corrective, recreational, and preventive gymnastics," is simplified for business and professional women by the physical education department of the American Women's Association in New York, which includes two gymnasiums and a swimming pool, all open to the public.

"To help women get more fun out of living and to remedy physical imperfections" is the aim of Miss Catherine Van Rensselaer, director of the department. A shining illustration of the ideals she holds out, Miss Van Rensselaer radiates health and good humor in infectious manner. She presides over one of the most modern and complete gymnasiums in New York City, of which a woman writer recently said:

"Cooled from the top floor of the imposing 27-story clubhouse which houses it and equipped with 186 dressing rooms, each with shower and ample locker facilities, this 'gym' is an irresistible temptation to the woman who, at the end of a busy day, longs for beauty and relaxation.

"Both the timid and adventurous swimmer can revel in the graded depths of the swimming pool, which is continously cleansed by a delicate and effective chemical and regularly tested by a bacteriological expert. Plunges in the pool are free each morning and all the residents in the clubhouse, which, by the way, is not restricted to members of the Association, but is open to women from all over the world.

"Besides the regular gym work and games, large classes in tap dancing signify the general trend toward rhythm, while for excess avoirdupois, underweight or the correction of physical defects, there are special exercises and individual gymnastics."

One terrible effect of the depression is seen in the fact that many families must worry along with only one car.

CALIFORNIA NEWS REVIEW

Shasta county will have no fair in Anderson this fall. The County Farm Bureau, under which the fair has been held for years, decided to abandon the fair during this time of economic distress on the farms.

Al Thomas, Mojave desert character, is feeling the depression. This year, he reports, rattlesnakes are bringing only 50 cents a pound, as compared with $2.50 in better times. Snake gathering is Thomas' principal business. He lets them drink out of his hand after he has had them in captivity for a while.

Co-operating with officers in an effort to prevent operations of a gang of chicken thieves in the Porterville district, the Porterville Poultry Association is offering a reward of $50 for information leading to arrest and conviction of any person or persons stealing poultry from an association member.

Captain Lynn and Lieutenant Crumrine of the pursuit squadron that will hold its areial practice at Honey lake near Susanville this year, arrived at the Wales ranch and completed negotiations for a camp site. The fifteen planes that will make the Wales ranch their headquarters are expected to follow in a few days.

Like the report of Mark Twain's death, news dispatches reporting all of Visalias business district was destroyed by a $100,000 fire were considerably exaggerated. The Chamber of Commerce requested that the truth be announced. Total damage in the fire which was in one small brick building was $3000.

District Inspector S. G. Yoder of Sacramento was appointed by Governor Rolph and Emery Cato, chief of the Motor Vehicle Enforcement Department, to help establish a State highway patrol in Arizona. The State of Arizona asked California officials to cooperate in the establishment of a highway patrol patterned after the California organization.

A half block of business houses in Riverbank, east of Modesto, is in ruins after a $25,000 fire which for a time threatened the entire community. Starting from defective wiring, according to Fire Chief C. G. Snyder, in a bakery operated by Eugene and Michael Pogolotti, the flames spread quickly to four adjoining stores.

The State will shortly begin steps to secure rights of way along the Golden State highway in Kern county from Famosa south to Bakerseld, ten miles, for the purpose of planting shade trees along the stretch, E. E. Wallace, district State highway engineer, announced. Last March ten miles of shade trees were planted from Famos north.

Cactus smuggling has made its debut as one of the newest of illicit enterprises. Paul Hahn, Jr., of San Diego county was arrested by John Allstaeter, Federal plant quarantine officer, on a charge of bringing a truckload of cactus plants across the Mexican line without submitting them to quarantine inspection. He was found guilty and fined $200 in Federal court at San Diego. The new flair for the amateur gardener for raising queer cactus specimens is held responsible for the illegal importations.

Compulsory military training will be continued at the University of California. Following a careful consideration of letters, petitions and resolutions from individual citizens, religious organizations and defense groups, both for and against the continuation of compulsory military training for students, the regents announced none of the facts obtained seemed to warrant the changing of the policy which has been in force since the university was chartered more than fifty-three years ago.

California has two thousand railroad grade crossings which should be separated at once to provide motorists with a proper measure of safety on the State's highways. Delegates to the Sixth Annual Convention of the Municipal Traffic League of California, in session recently at San Francisco, were told this by A. G. Mott, chief engineer for the State Railroad Commission. To accomplish this would cost $200,000,000, Mott added. Under the present financial arrangement, half the cost of such work is borne by the railroad and half by the communities directly benefitted, he said. In addition to the 2,000 crossing which should be separated, Mott declared that special warning signs should be posted at 3,600 others, at an estimated cost of $8,000,000. He pointed out that 50 per cent of such crossings lie within city limits, and that 82 per cent of crossing accidents occur in incorporated areas.

Four test cars forwarded from Vacaville a few weeks ago to try out a new method of ventilation, arrived in New York in good condition. Each car had a heavy load of Vacaville fruit, and the results obtained were encouraging both to the railroad company and the orchardists.

The proposed increase in freight rates is to be opposed by local apricot and almond growers of Arbuckle, who maintain that 75 per cent of the market value of California crops is eaten up in freight charges to Eastern markets.

Exports of oranges from San Francisco to the United Kingdom have been greater during 1931 than ever before, totaling more than 5000 boxes for the first five months, according to the Bureau of Foreign and Domestic Commerce.

Shattering records for this year, a total of 93 out-of-state automobiles, carrying 276 passengers, were checked through the Clam Beach checking station of the California highway patrol in a single day. The previous high mark for one day was 92 cars.

Governor Rolph in Los Angeles announced the appointment of Dr. George C. Sabichi of Bakerseld to succeed Claude S. Smith as superintendent of the Whittier State School for Boys. The Governor said the appointment was made by Dr. J. M. Toner, director of State institutions.

California is collecting approximately $60,000 monthly from twenty-four independent oil companies which are delinquent $2,250,000 in their gasoline taxes, through a "cleanup" being made by State Controller Ray L. Riley. The State Controller estimates the State may lose $500,000 from companies now out of business. This means that the State probably will collect epproximately $1,000,000 of the total delinquency.

By producing 710 pounds of butter fat during a 305-day test, California Napoleon's Flora, a Jersey cow in the University of California herd at Davis, is winner of a gold medal presented by the American Jersey Cattle Club, according to Professor W. M. Regan. During her recent test this cow produced more than eighty pounds of butterfat per month for three months. She was five years and one month of age when the test started.

In an opinion involving property worth millions of dollars, the State Board of Equalization recently ruled that lands and buildings leased to public utilities are still subject to local taxation. Alameda, Contra Costa, Fresno, Humboldt, Kern, Los Angeles, Orange, Sacramento, San Francisco and San Joaquin Counties were particularly interested in the board's findings. State officials indicated they anticipate court action may be filed to test the board's decision.

State highway projects totaling $9,740,500 will be last launched during July, Colonel Walter E. Garrison, State public works director, informed the governor's Cabinet. Garrison said the total will include $3,174,000 in contracts awarded or pending award, $2,595,200 in advertised projects and $3,971,200 in work proposed for advertising by July 31. Allen Bixby, chairman of the State Veterans' Welfare Board, reported that 5,000 applications of former service men for State home purchase aid have been approved this year.

All one-man street cars in California must be equipped with "dead man controls," which automatically stops the car and opens the doors in the event anything happens to the operator, under a new safety regulation drawn up by the State Railroad Commission. Proposed adoption of this and other safety rules effecting electric railways will be given a public hearing on September 29, according to an order issued by the commission. The hearing will be held in San Francisco before Commissioner M. B. Harris.

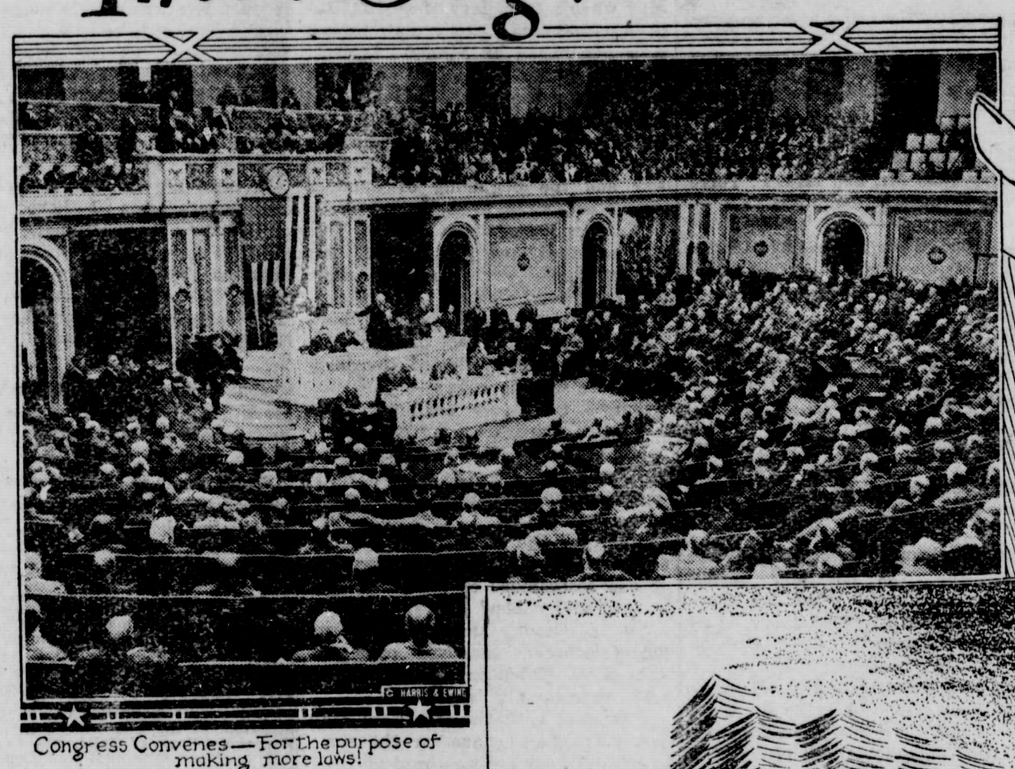

All negotiations for pumping of water from Lake Tahoe this year to relieve the drought situation along the Truckee River in western Nevada were broken off during a recent meeting held at Tahoe city. The session, which lasted six hours, was presided over by Jack Mathews, chairman of the joint committee appointed by governors of California and Nevada. Commenting upon the abrupt ending of the negotiations, the Nevada ranchers and other river interests declared a few California owners on Lake Tahoe made demands utterly impossible of fulfillment as a condition precendent to pumping, while the Californians who demanded the fuifillment of thees conditions held the Nevadans had failed to meet them half way.

California's highway patrol will be increased to nearly 600 patrolmen, inspectors, county captains and other officials within the next twelve months it has been announced by Superintendent E. Raymond Cato. New State officers will be distributed among the counties as follows: San Mateo, 3; Alameda, 1; Colusa, 1; Kern, 2; Marin, 2; San Uuis Obispo, 2; San Bernardino, 1; Ventura, 2; Santa Barbara, 2; Tuolumne, 2. Reorganization of night patrol work in twenty-five counties for greater efficiency in highway control also was announced by Cato. During the next fortnight, Cato said, night patrolmen will be assigned as follows: Marin 2, Placer 2, Sacramento 4, San Luis Obispo 2, Santa Cruz 2, Yolo 4, Tulare 2, Alameda 4, Monterey 4, Napa 2, Riverside 2, San Bernardino 2, San Diego 2, San Joaquin 4, San Mateo 4, Santa Clara 2, Yuba 2, Ventura 2, Stanislaus 2 and Sonoma 2.

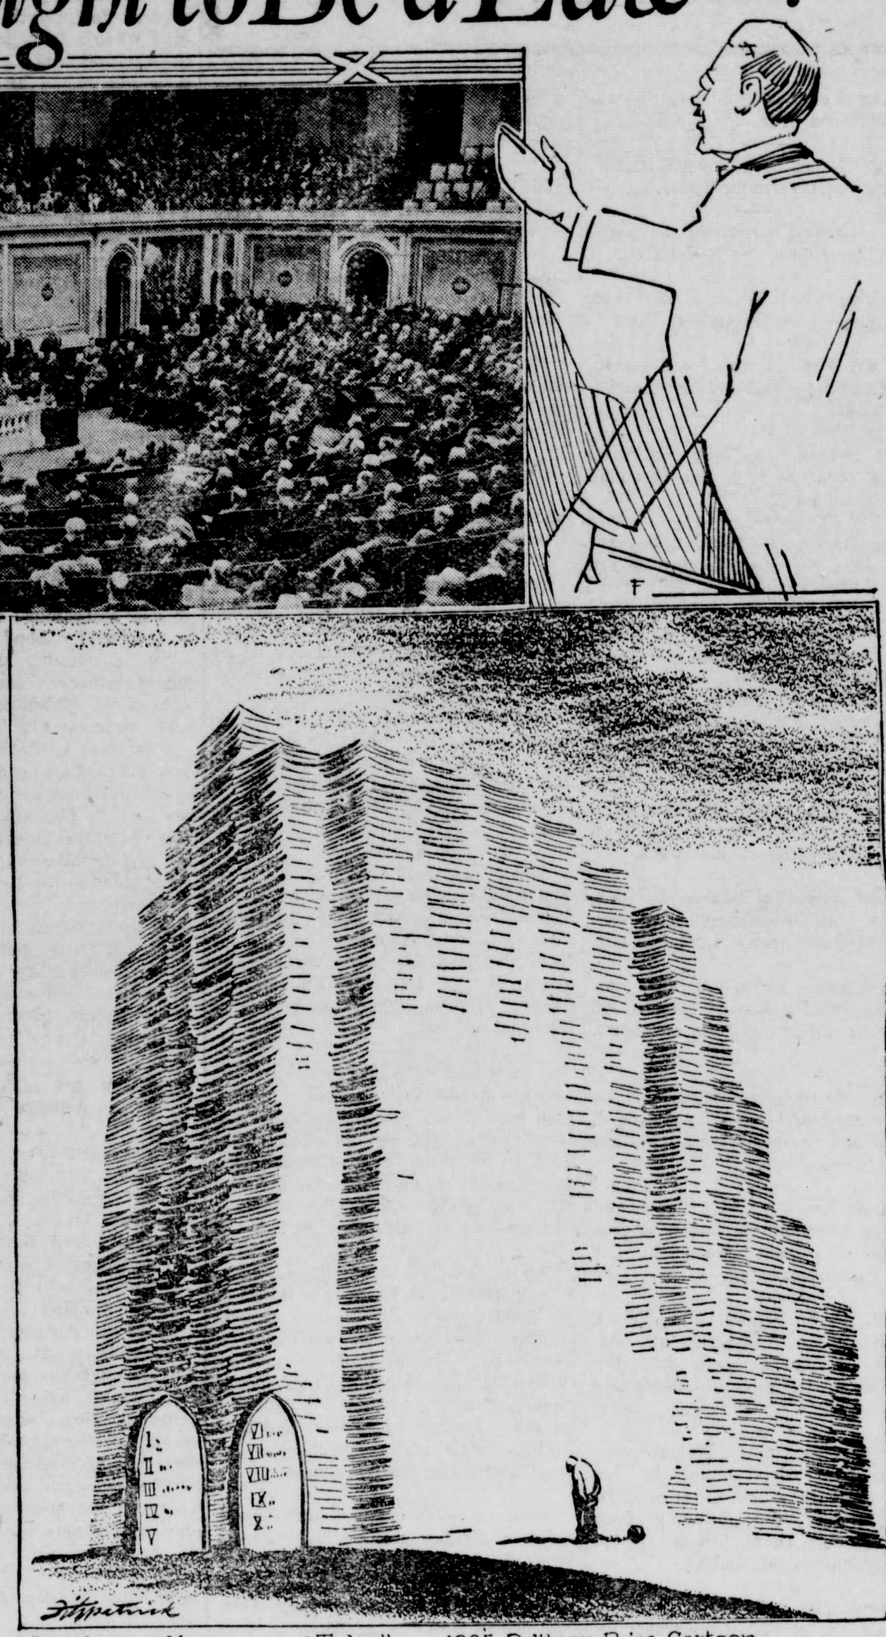

Ranchers of southern Alameda county whose crops are endangered by deer may shoot either does or bucks, but must first obtain permits from the California Fish and Game Commission. This warning was issued by County Game Warden Fred Rogers of Centerville.

Gov. Rolph indicated at Los Angeles recently that he will announce his appointments to the Superior Court and Municipal Court benches, in accordance with recent legislation, "some time toward the middle of July."

"There Ought to Be a Law—!"

Congress Convenes—For the purpose of making more laws!

"The Laws of Moses and of Today" 1925 Pulitzer Prize Cartoon by D. R. Fitzpatrick of the St. Louis Post-Dispatch

By ELMO SCOTT WATSON

MR. JOHN CITIZEN stamped into his home, snorting with indignation. He had had an unpleasant experience as a result of carelessness, thoughtlessness and lack of consideration upon the part of Mr. William Citizen which had caused him some temporary discomfort, if not permanent harm. So into the sympathetic ear of his wife he poured out his grievance and ended his tirade with the declaration, "There ought to be a law!"

But should there? For some time critics of our democracy have been telling us that one of the things that's the matter with us is that we have too many laws on the books and too little observance of even a small per cent of them. So why should we add to the number and then have another law which will be forgotten almost as soon as it is passed to join the long list of those which are either unknown or, even if they are known, are disregarded? One of the most powerful cartoons ever drawn by an American cartoonist was awarded a Pulitzer prize in 1925. It was "The Laws of Moses and the Laws of Today," by Daniel R. Fitzpatrick of the St. Louis Post-Dispatch. Take a look at it, as it is reproduced with this article. Then it will not be necessary to say another word in this article as to whether or not there should be any more laws.

But whether there should be or shouldn't, the fact remains that the business of making laws still goes merrily on. Early in 1931 a press dispatch carried the news that American legislators felt "there ought to be a law" some 50,000 times this year and translated that feeling into more than 14,000 new statutes." This number, it is said, adds to the variously estimated 2,000,000 to 10,000,000 laws which have been enacted since the United States came into being.

All this mass production of "Thou shalt nots" wouldn't be so bad perhaps if legislative bodies ever showed much inclination to undo the work of their predecessors by repealing some of the outworn statutes or at least those which are so patently filled with absurdities

Away back in 1635 the great and general court of the Massachusetts Bay Colony wrote upon its records the following:

"Whereas, Mr. Roger Williams, one of the elders of the church of Salem, hath broached and divulged divers new and dangerous opinions against the authority of magistrates; and also writ letters of defamation, both of the magistrates and churches here, and that before any conviction, and yet maintaineth the same without any retraction; it is therefore ordered, that the said Mr. Williams shall depart out of this jurisdiction within six weeks now next evening, which if he neglect to perform, it shall be lawful for the governor and two of the magistrates to send him to some place out of this jurisdiction, not to return any more without license from the court."

So banished Mr. Roger Williams was and banished Mr. Roger Williams seemed likely to stay for nearly three hundred years. Then in 1928 a representative decided that there was not now much danger from Mr. Williams on account of "divers new and dangerous opinions against the authority of magistrates," and so he introduced a bill into the Massachusetts house to revoke the decree banishing Mr. Williams. The Bay state was preparing to celebrate its tercentenary and in especial, the three hundredth anniversary of John Winthrop's arrival on the stern and rockbound coast. The representative thought that it would be a graceful gesture to the memory of Governor Winthrop who "during his lifetime manifested constant esteem and abiding friendship for Williams and strove without avail to modify his sentence." But evidently the other members of the house didn't think so or else they still feared those "new and dangerous opinions," for the house, without debate, accepted a report by the judiciary recommending "leave to withdraw" on the bill to revoke the sentence of banishment. So Mr. Roger Williams still stays banished from Massachusetts.

But even though the Massachusetts legislature of that year didn't see fit to proclaim officially that it no longer feared the malign influence of the founder of Rhode Island, it did act on other obsolete statutes. In delving into the subject of useless laws it found some curious examples of how the American people, or at least their delegated authorities, dearly love to regulate their habits—or at any rate, the habits of the other fellow. For instance, one legislator discovered that there was a law which set the length that an unprotected hat-pin might project from the crown of a woman's hat at one-half inch. This went back only to 1913, when the ladies wore many huge ornamental hatpins, projecting like daggers, several inches from their hats. Some serious accidents had resulted so a legislator decided "there ought to be a law" against long hat-pins and it was passed after considerable but not particularly heated debate. In these days of bobbed hair and close fitting hats hat-pins are virtually unknown, so the law was no longer needed. But it took the law makers of Massachusetts 15 years to get around to finding that out.

It took them even longer to get around to finding out about certain other obsolete enactments. Slavery was abolished many years ago in Massachusetts and it became one of the hotbeds of abolitionism which finally brought about the Civil war. But in 1928 it was discovered that there still remained on the statute books, and presumably in full force, a law which specified that anyone who "sells or in any way transfers the service or labor of a negro who has been unlawfully taken from the commonwealth shall be punished by a ten year term in state prison or a fine of $1,000."

Speak of Massachusetts in connection with laws which have been enacted in that state and one inevitably thinks of the famous "blue laws" which are commonly associated with the word "Puritanism." Such an association is often an inaccurate one, for the fact is that other states besides Massachusetts have had "blue laws."

Gustavus Myers, in "Ye Olden Blue Laws," points out the Puritans' decree in 1629 against the planting of tobacco was the beginning of the whole code of inhibitive laws. The fight against tobacco was a losing one, he says, because the average Puritan liked tobacco so well that he not only smoked but drank it. The law was held invalid by a court decision in 1680.

The next battle was against fashion; in 1634 the general court of Massachusetts passed a summary act.

"The stated grounds for the law," said Mr. Myers, "were the need of strict economy and the immodesty of the new fashions. Costly apparel, the law said, entailed great, superfluous and unnecessary expenses. The common wearing of silver or gold girdles, silk laces, hat bands and other such adornment was a folly.

"It was therefore decreed that no man or woman was thereafter to make or buy any apparel, whether woolen, silk or linen, with any lace on it. Neither should it contain any silver, gold or silk thread. If any person presumed to appear in clothes of that kind the clothes were to be confiscated.

"One of the Puritans' very first laws was one against idleness. This did not mean merely shiftlessness. A couple of women exchanging gossip (which was then the sole vehicle of news); a youth sitting on a stump and contemplating landscape beauties; a group of men in expansive social converse—all these and many others came under the ban of idleness.

"Death for cursing or striking parents was decreed."

As for the "blue laws" in other colonies, Mr. Myers states that in New York pastimes on Sundays were forbidden as well as worldly labor and this included hunting, shooting, horse racing and other acts. Connecticut followed the lead of Massachusetts in classifying actors as vagabonds and forbidding acting and plays. Death was long the punishment for blasphemy, according to one of Connecticut's twelve capital laws based upon the Mosaic code, but there appears to be no case recorded where this penalty was inflicted.

We commonly think of the Cavaliers of Virginia as being more "broad-minded" than the Puritans of New England but compulsory church attendance was one of the initial Virginia laws. The penalty for violation was a fine of a pound of tobacco. If a person stayed away for a month the fine was fifty pounds of tobacco.

Some of the early day fox hunting ministers of Virginia often acted in a manner that created scandal, but when they were criticized they obtained a law preventing the people from commenting upon their conduct. The clergy and the church wardens and vestries were censors of morals and inquisitors of public and private life.

"The stocks, pillory, whipping post and ducking stool came much later in Virginia than in New England," says Mr. Myers, "but they were set up in every county court house. Anyone, either drunk or sober—so ordered the Virginia army regulations of 1676—'who blasphemed the name of God should, for every offense, run the gauntlet through one hundred men or thereabouts.' And if the blasphemer persisted in his wickedness he was 'to be bored through the tongue with a hot iron.'"

But lest residents of other states get the idea that the commonwealths on the Atlantic seaboard, with their heritage of "blue laws" from colonial days, are the only ones whose statute books have been, or still are, cluttered up with legal oddities and absurdities, consider now the case of a middle western state. Away back in the early days of Illinois the legislature of that state passed what was known as "the little bull bill." Unlike some other legislation, however, it did not have to wait long before it was repealed. By this act small bulls were prohibited, under severe penalties on their owners, from running at large. It was designed to improve the breed of cattle in the prairie state, but it became apparent that passing such a law was not the way to do it.

Immediately there arose a storm of popular indignation. The "little bulls" found hundreds of champions. The law was denounced as being the "work of the aristocrats" and intended to favor the rich who could afford to own large bulls, and who would profit by the destruction of the small ones. More than that the outraged citizenry felt there should be an equality of privilege even among bulls. So the frightened legislators immediately repealed the "little bull" bill, but it was not done soon enough to save some of the legislators from the ire of their constituency. Many an embryo statesman in that legislature was lost to his country because he voted for that bill and many of them failed of re-election on that issue alone.

If space allowed, the list of useless laws, of unnecessary laws, of laws which are destined to become so much legal deadwood could be extended indefinitely and it would include every state in the Union. For the business of making laws still goes merrily on and still we, disregarding the fact that we already have between 2,000,000 and 10,000,000 of them, continue to declare every so often, "There ought to be a law—!" Yes, there ought to be a law, indeed—a law against making more laws!

FISH AND GAME NOTES

By J. H. NEUSTADT

Striped bass are thriving in the Salton Sea, according to latest reports coming to the Division of Fish and Game from Southern California deputies.

This sea, forty-five miles in length and fifteen miles wide, was formerly a barren water. Because of the absence of good trout streams in this district, sportsmen and officials of the division worked out a plan to utilize the sea for food and game fishes.

Fish culturists from the division made various tests of the geographical characteristics of the district, temperature and the saline content of the water. Data thus gathered prompted a strong recommendation for the introduction of striped bass. Two carloads of fish—five thousand bass of from four to six inches in length—were then introduced. Close observation is being made on the welfare of these bass and so far no reports have been unfavorable.

According to W. H. Shebley, chief of the division's bureau of fish culture, this is one of the most important experiments in fish introduction into waters of like character ever recorded. With the assurance of a plentiful supply of striped bass in this great inland sea, sportsmen of the locality need never worry for a suitable place to try their angling skill.

The experiment is being watched from all parts of the country and Europe, officials point out. With success almost assured, it may be the means by which many other barren inland waters of the world are made to produce an excellent game and food fish.

And now the nose-puff for deer. This may sound like minus zero in boudoir accoutrements, but ranchers in the mountain districts declare that it is the very latest word in style. It's a cheap luxury, too. Deer are falling for it in herds.

Heres' how you fashion this very latest creation. Take an old heavy wool blanket or overcoat, tear it or them into strips, roll into neat wads and secure firmly with a piece of wire. Then what? Very simple—dip the wads into undiluted sheep-dip or creosote, being sure that the material becomes thoroughly saturated, and hang each "puff" on a different fruit tree. Be sure that the material does not touch the tree, as it will burn the bark and wood.

But why select a fruit tree? Because deer are very fond of fruit and have a habit of raiding orchards and giving the farmer something else to worry about. It is a problem that is causing no end of discussion.

Experiments performed by Gordon H. True, Jr., of the Division of Fish and Game, show that deer entering the orchards to feed on the fruit, take a sniff at the scented "puff," bound away and forget all about the food.

The "puffs" should be sprayed or redipped about every three weeks, according to True. Where this method has been followed as outlined, control has been almost 100 per cent. Woolen material must be used, because it retains the liquid for a longer period.

Mr. E. L. LaCompte, state game warden of Maryland, has the following to say, and it is worth repeating: "The killing impulse inherited from our ancestors, through education is being superseded by higher standards of sportsmanship—to hunt for the joy of the chase and the thrills which come to one being in wild places."

Altough a few years ago our covers were becoming depleted of a number of species of wild life, through cooperation we have been enabled to prevent any species from becoming extinct, and those species which, a few years ago, were at a low ebb, have shown a decided increase due to protection and propagation.

While we are not aware of the importance or value our descendants will place on wild life in the future, we do realize that it is our duty to pass this great heritage on to posterity with as little decrease as possible.

The word "conservation" comes from the Latin which has funished many of our words in common use. It means to save, to protect, to preserve or care for; to guard or keep safe in an entire state. But my interpretation of the meaning of the word is to the effect that while we should at all times conserve, we should not deem it unwise to make the proper use of our natural resources. Conservation really means a prevention of waste, the wise use of what God has placed on this earth for use."

It is evident one of California's royal sports is striped bass fishing. The Vallejo Sporting Goods Supply Company has just issued a list of the large fish weighed in at their store and it contains many of heroic size, ranging from 25 pounds to 46 pounds up to the year 1930. Then the year 1931 opened with one weighing 61 pounds, and greater things are expected.

Nature has made us a great gift, and it is up to us to conserve it, and pass it along to our children.

SIDELIGHTS

Not very reassuring has been the performance of the Nautilus, the submarine in which Sir Hubert Wilkins plans trying to reach the North Pole under the ice. While cruising in the Atlantic her batteries went bad and one engine broke down. After fighting a gale the Nautilus was taken in tow by the battleship Wyoming. It seems that a more trustworthy craft should be obtained for the hazardous Wilkins enterprise.

Real mothers-in-law are reputed to enjoy a certain amount of leeway in messing up family affairs, but a Glasgow judge has ruled that a mere prospective mother-in-law must deny herself such liberties. Hence Mrs. G. H. Stewart, who interfered with her son's marriage to Miss Grace Leighton, must pay the prospective bride $750 damages.

M. Francis of Paris has recovered his stomach, although it will never be of any practical use to him. The organ was removed during an operation, after which it disappeared. He employed detectives to find it, which they did in the laboratory of a local physician, who had taken it for professional study.

Among recent signs and avertisements the following are noted: "Prepare for a long, dreary evening with the radio." "Our tongue sandwiches speak for themselves." "Try our pig's feet; we pickle our own."

A resident of Cairo, Egypt, is charged with a serious shortage. He is called upon to account for sixty wives who have disappeared during the past thirty years. Some were divorced, but others are said to have died under suspicious circumstances.

DID YOU EVER STOP TO THINK?

By Edson R. Waite, Shawnee, Okla.

Everybody in this imperfect world lacks something, but the most unfortunate of all is he that lacks sense of humor. This is the more tragic in that humor is one of the qualities that is innate rather than acquired, though certainly it may be developed with an effort. The fact remains that some people are bubbling over with humor because they can not help it—or, at least, they can only help it with great effort.

Anger is to some extent a narrowing of the eyelids. Sorrow is represented by a drooping of the corners of the mouth. Mirth is a slight parting of the lips, charming in a few people, but utterly ridiculous in others. It is a fact that if you smile, that is if you go through the motions of smiling, even if it is necessary to do it by numbers so to speak, sense of mirth is produced. Just as a yawn is delightful when sleepy, or a sneeze when snuffy, or a hiccough when replete, so is a smile, even a mechanical smile, pleasing when one is depressed. That is why lots of people are free from care, and there is no reason why you should not try it too.

Smiling should not, except in rare cases, be practiced before a looking glass, as it might induce a fit instead of a mere healthy sense of humor. It should not be indulged in in public except under cover of a newspaper or a pocket handkerchief. But nevertheless, it should be practiced whenever you are unhappy, and you will find that just as tears relieve some people, so may a smile. You will immediately feel better. It is quicker than medicine and cheaper. A contraction of the lips accompanied with a downward drag of the corners of the eyes infallibly produces a sense of contentment—provided always that the facial contortion has not been visible to oneself.

In these days and times a quick sense of humor is more than ever desirable.

A tree-planting machine that can plant trees 6 feet apart on a 10-acre area in a day has been invented.

The newest type of window glass can be rolled up and cut with shears.

Fair warning given by a Missouri farmer in a notice posted on his fence: "If any man's or woman's oxen or cows gets in these here oats, his or her tail will be cut off, as the case may be."

SPLINTERS

From the H. H. Smith Lumber Yard

VOLUME 4 FRIDAY, JULY 10, 1931 NUMBER 50

Published in the interests of the People of Daly City and vicinity by H. H. Smith and Employees.

The accused: "I was not going forty miles an hour—not twenty—not even ten—in fact, when the officer came up to me I was almost at a standstill."

Judge: "I must stop this at once, or you will be backing into someone. Forty dollars!"

Yes, we sell Paints and Oils—the best.

McPherson: "What be the matter with Sandy, he seems so doonhearted of late?"

McTavish: "His daughter is taking gymnastic exercises and he is afraid she will lose some of her weight."

The Best Town—Your Home Town.

Minister: "I wish to announce that next Wednesday evening the Laides' Aid will have a rummage sale. This is a chance for all ladies of the congregation to get rid of anything that is not worth keeping but is too good to be thrown away. Don't forget to bring your husbands."

Are you willing to reduce your expenses? Get Coal of us and you will.

Alice: "Which candidate are you going to vote for, Mabel?

Mabel: "How can I tell when I haven't soon a good picture of either one of them yet?"

"And what is a budget?"

"As nearly as I can tell, it's a system of worrying before you spend instead of afterward."

Are you Hungary?

Yes, Siam. Give me some Turkey, Sweden my coffee, and Denmark my bill.

Build a home first. A home costs you nothing in the long run.

Flub: "What caused the collision today?"

Dub: "Two motorists after the same pedestrian."

Lawyer: "What is your occupation?"

Witness: "I am a trunk finisher."

Lawyer: "Be more specific. Do you make them, or are you a baggageman?"
